

ZHANG WEI

Liaoning Normal University

School of Urban and Environmental Sciences

Current position

Second distinguished professor of Liaoning Normal University (LNU), the associate dean of School of Urban and Environmental Sciences LNU.

Institutional roles

A member of China Geographical Society. A member of the geographic landform and Quaternary professional committee of China Geographical Society. A council member of the survey and measurement branch of Liaoning Urban Planning Association. An executive director of Liaoning Geographical Society. An outstanding young backbone teacher of Liaoning Province, China. A teacher in the hundred talents project of Liaoning Province.

[Main research interests

Physical geography of the environment and landform process, assessment for the environmental disaster geomorphology in the mountain area, glacier geomorphology and the Quaternary environmental evolution, didactic studies in geography

ACADEMIC CAREER

Lecturer in hydrologic and engineering geology in 1998, associate professor in physical geography in 2003 and professor in 2008. PHD in the Peking University in Beijing, China. Host of the projects of the National Natural Science Foundation (NNSF) promoted by the NNSF committee of China (2012-2016). Host of the project of provincial scientific research promoted by the Education department of Liaoning Province (2007-2009). Scientific coordinator for projects of the teaching reform promoted by the Education Department (2014-2017).